

!Streaming-live!*- Canada vs Panama Live World Cup Qualifiers Free HD 13 October 2021

Canada vs. Panama odds, picks, how to watch, live stream: 2022 World Cup qualifier predictions for Oct. 13
TV channel, date, time, best bets for the 2022 Concacaf World Cup qualifier featuring Panama vs. Canada

Since FIFA World Cup play began in 1930, the Canada men's national team has only qualified for the biggest event in global soccer once. That was all the way back in 1986, and the Canadians were dealt three consecutive defeats and sent home after the group stage. However, Canada now finds itself in the thick of the qualification race in 2022 Concacaf World Cup qualifying and will play a pivotal match against Panama on Wednesday. Panama is currently third in the table with eight points, while Canada is fourth with seven. Only the top three in the octagonal will automatically qualify for the 2022 FIFA World Cup.

Wednesday's match will be played at BMO Field in Toronto and kickoff is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. ET. The latest Canada vs. Panama odds from Caesars Sportsbook list the Canadians as -182 favorites (risk $182 to win $100) on the 90-minute money line. Panama is the +550 underdog, while a draw brings back +230. The over-under for total goals is 2.5. Wednesday's match will be streamed live on Paramount+ with their must-have Premium plan.

Paramount+ now has levels of membership so you can watch the World Cup Qualifiers and much more. The Premium Plan is $9.99 per month and you can watch your local CBS live stream (including plenty of sports like SEC on CBS, NFL on CBS, and the PGA Tour), no ads, on demand and the ability to download episodes for offline viewing. Both plans come with a free week to start, so sign up now here.

How to watch Canada vs. Panama
Date: Wednesday, Oct. 13
Time: 7:30 p.m. ET
Streaming: Paramount+

Concacaf World Cup qualifying picks for Panama vs. Canada

Before you tune in to Wednesday's World Cup qualifiers, you need to see the Concacaf World Cup qualifier picks from soccer insider Roger Gonzalez. Gonzalez is an award-winning writer that has covered pro soccer from Europe to South America. Gonzalez started out his pro soccer writing career while in college at Virginia Tech, writing for Goal.com. He's also covered the Copa America, Champions League, Copa Libertadores, and much more. Since 2015, he's been the lead soccer writer for CBS Sports.

For Canada vs. Panama, Gonzalez predicts that over 2.5 goals will be scored for a +140 return. Thus far, Canada has looked inconsistent in World Cup qualifying but remains unbeaten through five matches. The Canadians have four draws, including critical draws against Mexico and the USMNT, and also beat El Salvador 3-0 in their last home match.

Canada also drew 1-1 against Honduras in its only other home match so far during the final round of 2022 Concacaf World Cup qualifying, but did score 12 times in three home matches during the first and second rounds of qualifying. Cyle Larin, Jonathan David and Alphonso Davies give Canada juice going forward in attack.

"Canada has had issues finding consistent goals in attack and scored multiple times in just one of its last six games," Gonzalez told SportsLine. "They cannot afford to slip up here against Panama, and I'm expecting an electric performance similar to the 3-0 win over El Salvador. I'm taking the over with Jonathan David scoring twice."

How to watch, live stream World Cup Qualifiers on Paramount+

Canada ready for "six-point match" vs. major WCQ rivals Panama

The mood surrounding the Canadian men's national team entering Wednesday's Concacaf World Cup qualifier against Panama at Toronto FC's BMO Field is a stark contrast to Friday morning. Having earned a vital draw at Estadio Azteca versus Mexico, and arguably deserving the win, Canada are now staring at the prospect of a winless October window.

Canada are coming off a dull scoreless draw against Jamaica and trail Panama for the third and final automatic qualification spot after they defeated the US men's national team on Sunday. That makes Wednesday night's affair even more significant (7:30 pm ET | Paramount+, OneSoccer).

On the bright side for Canada, defenders Steven Vitoria and Richie Laryea are returning from suspension along with the electric Tajon Buchanan.

The likes of Stephen Eustaquio and Mark-Anthony Kaye are on yellow-card warnings but did not pick up another booking against Jamaica. Eustaquio came on as a second-half substitute but should start, whereas Kaye has started two matches and could be due for a rest.

Unfortunately for Canada, Junior Hoilett returned to Reading after suffering a hamstring tear leading up to the Jamaica match. None of Lucas Cavallini, Cyle Larin nor Atiba Hutchinson were able to make the trip as they stayed at their respective clubs to recover from injury.

That makes Buchanan's return especially vital for a Canadian attack that lacked incisiveness on Sunday afternoon in Kingston. While Liam Millar produced the best opportunity for Canada in that draw, the New England Revolution forward was a livewire against Mexico and should be equally lively at BMO Field.

"It's crucial," said Canada coach John Herdman. "We knew in the Mexico game, we wanted one of Richie [Laryea] or Tajon to pick up a yellow. We did need one of those players, I felt, for the Jamaica game either starting or coming off the bench, so to have two of them fresh is brilliant."

With a few options returning to the fold, it allows Herdman to name a mostly full-strength lineup versus the Panamanians, pending potential changes to the midfield – and he will need it.

Panama have conceded 37 shots and just two goals through five matches, which includes games against the USMNT and Mexico. Facing one of the stingiest and battle-hardened teams in the Octagon means all hands need to be on deck.

"They have that veteran leadership," said Herdman. "You can see that in every game, they are just a team that can manage games very well. That game at home to Mexico ... was a big one for me because they are a team that aren't really rotating players. They rely on a veteran core, guys are playing a lot of accumulated minutes, and then you watch them in a match against Mexico, they were a little bit wounded through that phase and were able to be 1-0 up until the 74th minute or 75th minute, and you just see how committed and connect that group is."

One player who will be familiar to some members of Canada's roster is Anibal Godoy, who has spent six years in MLS and is teammates with Alistair Johnston at Nashville SC.

"He's strong to a challenge, super competitive, one of those guys that is just a winner and a leader all-around," said Johnston. "He's very good at the Concacaf thing. He's qualified for a World Cup with this team. He's great at being able to draw fouls [and] just dominate a midfield. He really knows how to win games in Concacaf and it's something that they have shown, again, with that roster beating the US and getting some really good results.

"We know how big of a game it's going to be and one of our keys is going to have to be to shut down him and shut down their midfield."