

Investigation underway after Boston Public Schools bus bursts into flames

A Boston Public Schools bus went up in flames in Mattapan on Wednesday morning.

The bus caught on fire on Blue Hill Avenue in the area of Mattapan Square.

There were no students on board at the time of the fire and the bus driver is OK, according to BPS officials.

Video from the scene showed the front of the bus engulfed in bright orange flames and thick black smoke pouring into the air.

The charred bus was towed away from the scene after the fire was extinguished.

The cause of the fire remains under investigation.

No additional information was immediately available.
